

Brighton, England

July 7th, 2018

With Jeff Blyth

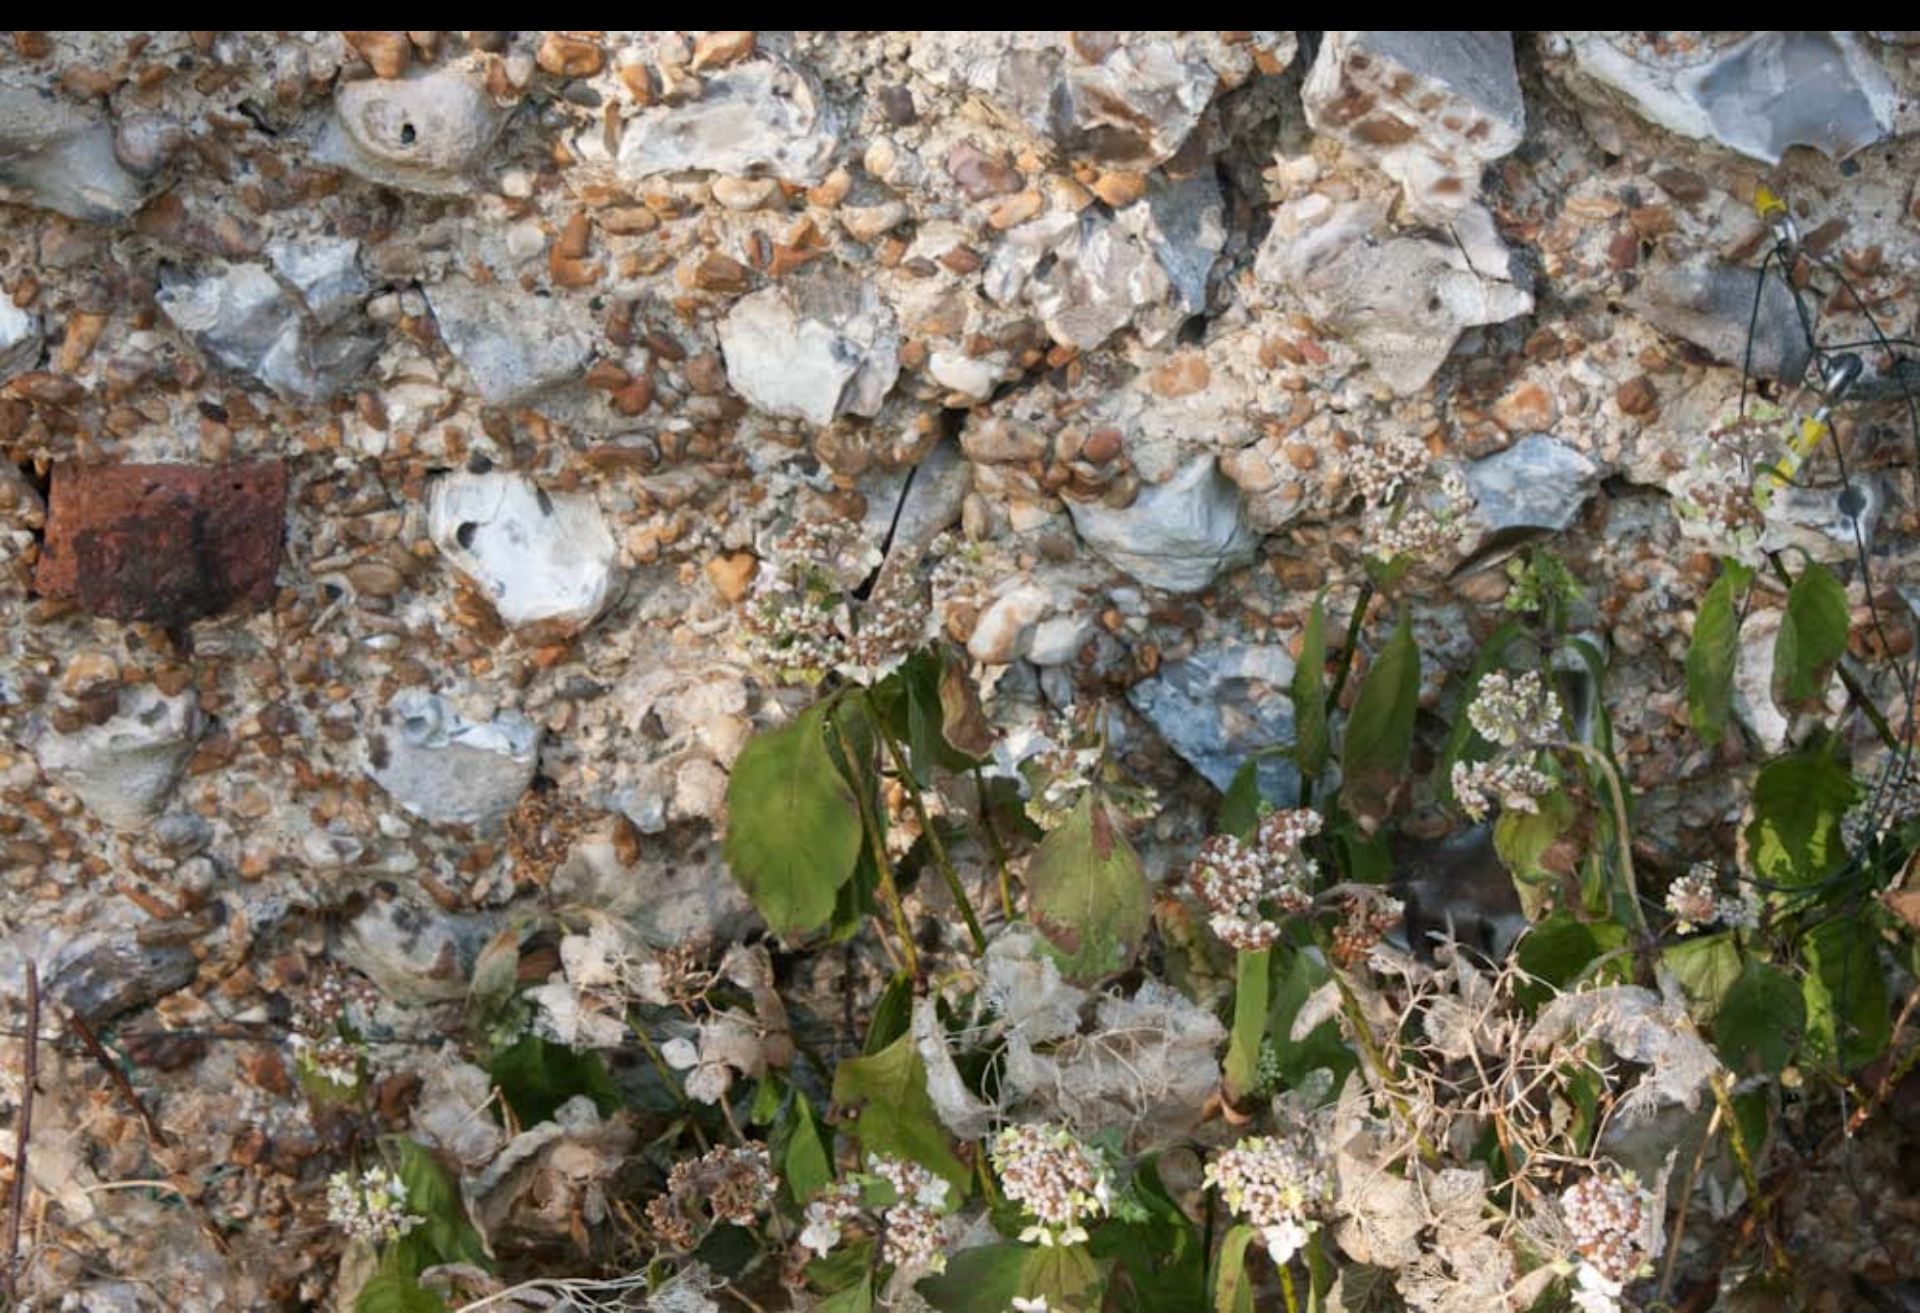

Spiral staircase from Jeff's kitchen to his backyard

Jeff's granddaughter, Twyla

Smoke from somebody down the
block's barbecue

A 19th century wall (house built in 1856).

Jeff's basement workshop

Chemical
stores galore!

Jeff at work

The fruits of the labor: a direct positive cyanotype process, the Blythtype!

Didn't take too many photos around town, as we were busy with his new process. He took a digital image of his granddaughter, Twyla, her dad, Alex, and myself with his digital camera, projected them with a digital projector onto a piece of paper treated with his new process, and we had a finished print in a matter of minutes!

Will link to his paper describing the process when it becomes available.

CLICK HERE FOR THE NEXT
STOP ON THE TRIP,
RICHMOND, ENGLAND